TOTAL POPULATION, INCREASE, AND DISTRIBUTION.

Population of the state.—Kentucky, originally a part of Virginia, was admitted to the Union as the fifteenth state in 1792. According to the Fourteenth Census, taken as of January 1, 1920, its population is 2,416,630, which represents an increase of 126,725, or 5.5 per cent, over the 1910 figure. During the same period the population of the United States increased by 14.9 per cent. The following summary shows the population of Kentucky from 1790 to 1920, inclusive, together with the number and per cent of increase in each decade, in comparison with the per cent of increase for the United States as a whole:

Counties.—Kentucky has 120 counties, of which 64 show decreases as compared with 1910. (See Table 1.)

A new county, McCreary, was organized between 1910 and 1920 from parts of three others, Pulaski, Wayne, and Whitley. It has been necessary, therefore, in preparing the maps on page 3, showing rates of increase or decrease in total and rural population of counties during the past decade, to combine the four counties named.

Density of population.—The total land area of the state is 40,181 square miles. The average number of inhabitants to the square mile in 1920 is 60.1 (see Table 1), as against 57 in 1910 and 53.4 in 1900.

Minor civil divisions.—The political units into which the counties are divided are collectively termed "minor civil divisions." The primary divisions of the Kentucky counties are the magisterial districts, which number 755. There are also 391 secondary divisions, comprising 63 cities, 327 towns, and 1 village. Each of 8 cities and 1 town is coextensive with the magisterial district in which located, while each of 25 cities and 25 towns comprises 2 or more districts or parts of districts. (See Table 2.)

Cities.—Kentucky has 63 cities, of which Louisville, with a population of 234,891, is the largest, and Covington, with 57,121, is the second in size. The only remaining cities having more than 25,000 inhabitants are Lexington and Newport. (See Tables 3 and 4.)

The following summary shows, for each city having 15,000 or more inhabitants in 1920, the population at each census for which figures are available, together with the number and per cent of increase during the preceding decade:

Urban and rural population.—The Census Bureau defines urban population as that residing in cities and other incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more, and rural population as that residing outside such incorporated places.

The following summary presents, for the last three censuses, figures showing the urban and rural population of the state distributed among places grouped according to specified limits of population. The classification for each census is based upon the population of the various places as shown by the returns of that census. Consequently the territory comprised within any one class of cities or that designated as urban or as rural does not remain fixed, because any given place may, through the growth or the decline of its population, pass from one class to another at successive censuses. The proportion of the population of Kentucky living in places of 2,500 or more increased from 21.8 per cent in 1900 to 24.3 per cent in 1910 and to 26.2 per cent in 1920.
